What is Safe Use of Fire Extinguishers Training ?

Under this legislation, employers are required to carry out regular fire risk assessments, provide training, and ensure that fire extinguishers are accessible and maintained. Employees also have responsibilities; they must participate in fire safety training and follow established fire safety protocols.

There are several types of fire extinguishers, each designed to tackle specific types of fires. It's crucial to use the correct type to avoid exacerbating the situation.

Fire safety is a critical aspect of workplace safety. Fires can cause significant damage to property, injuries, and, tragically, loss of life. In the last 12 months, there were over 153,000 fires attended by fire and rescue services in England, resulting in over 280 fatalities. Proper knowledge and training can help prevent such outcomes and ensure a swift and effective response in case of a fire.
